Derek Walcott - The New York Times

Derek Walcott was born in 1930 in the town of Castries in Saint Lucia, one of the Windward Islands in the Lesser Antilles. The experience of growing up on the island of St. Lucia, which is part of the eastern Caribbean, shaped Walcott's understanding of the world. His writing often reflects the tension between the European and African influences found on the island, as well as the island's history of colonialism and slavery. Walcott's work is noted for its use of both English and Creole, and for its exploration of the human condition through the lens of the Caribbean.
