Lakotas, Black Robes, and Holy Women: German Reports From The Indian Missions In South Dakota, 1886-1900

Karl Markus Kreis

Lakotas, Black Robes, and Holy Women: German Reports From the Indian Missions in South Dakota, 1886–1900 is an excellent summary of the German reports from the Indian Missions in South Dakota during the period 1886-1900. The book was edited by Karl Markus Kreis and translated by Corinna Dally-Starna.

The book provides a detailed account of the activities of the German missionaries in South Dakota, including their interactions with the Lakota people. It includes information about the missionaries' work in education, medicine, and religious instruction.

The book also provides insights into the cultural and social context of the time, offering a valuable resource for those interested in the history of German-American relations and the role of missionaries in shaping the cultural landscape of the American West.
