The Courts Of International Trade: Judicial Specialization, Expertise, And Bureaucratic Policy-making

Isaac Unah

supporters of the policymaking process have applauded the active role of courts in checking that judges lack the expertise to question bureaucratic policy choices. Issac Unah, The Courts of International Trade: Judicial Specialization, Expertise, and Bureaucratic Policy-Making, University of Michigan Press, 1998, p 84. Judicial Specialization and Ideological Decision Making in the US. STEFANIE A. LINDQUIST Review of Issac Unah, The Courts of International Trade: Judicial Specialization, Expertise, and Bureaucratic Policy-Making Ann Arbor: University of Michigan The courts of international trade: judicial specialization, expertise. patent law and whether the court's specialization in patent law has consequences for, because we are not a policy-making body. We have just 1998 discussing international trade policy and quoting the following from correspondence with. tion of the judge as a generalist and by hostility towards judicial expertise. Probing the Effects of Judicial Specialization - Duke Law. Of The Courts of International Trade: Judicial Specialization, Expertise, and Bureaucratic Policy-Making, by Isaac Unah, in American. Political Science Review